WI-337 Cissel House Wicomico County

Continuation Sheet 7.1 Description

The Cissel house is situated to the rear on 1.5 acres of land bounded by S. Main Street (MD 347) on the southeast and Old Railroad Avenue on the southwest. The dwelling is located to the rear (northwest) of the parcel. The entrance and egress front on S. Main Street and form a deep curved drive to the dwelling. A two car garage sits in the northwest corner behind and to the northwest side of the house, accessed by an artery off the driveway.

The structure is a two story frame dwelling with a second story overhang, five bays wide and three bays deep. A continuous shed dormer pierces the end gabled roof across the principle facade. The house is sheathed with vinyl siding. Physical features identify the residence as Colonial Revival structure constructed ca. 1920-30. However, the Lake, Griffing and Stevenson Atlas indicated a structure near this site in 1877 which would predate the style of the existing house. (This earlier structure also appears to have been located closer to Main Street, and thus is no longer extant).

Later additions have altered the building form of the Cissel House; a two-story shed has filled in the ell and a one-story shed has been added to the rear elevation. The facade overhang has been enclosed as a porch. The porch extends beyond the original structure and wraps the southwest (side) elevation and a portion of the northwest (rear) elevation. The gabled roof extends over the porch and forms a low hipped roof over the first floor additions on the south and west elevations.

The facade of the house faces southeast. The porch is ground level and is permanently enclosed with five bays of double 3'x 6' aluminum sliding glass doors (continuing around the porch with five bays on the southwest elevation extension, two bays on the northwest elevation (rear) portion, and one bay on the northeast end of the porch). The floor of the porch is surfaced with bricks installed by Cissel, the previous owner. The bricks had been collected over a period of time from sites of old structures, i.e. chimneys, foundations, walls, razed in the town.

The main entrance is located in the center bay of the facade, behind the center double sliding glass door. The door, a wooden 9-panel with a fixed center glass pane adorned with a spindle grill, is not original to the house. The door is raised one step above the porch floor. Most windows, excluding the enclosed porch alterations, are double-hung sash 9/1 with simple board enframements and dark green shutters. Shutters flank the entrance door as well. Window variations occur on the first floor elevations. The facade windows (not seen from the exterior) are taller and are grouped as a unit of three on either side of the door; 6/1 flank the larger center 9/1, and are also shuttered; a single 9-pane, non-shuttered window flank each side of the end fireplace of the north elevation and a double 12-pane horizontal non-shuttered window is on the south elevation. The 9/1 window configuration flank the chimney on the second story roof and additions.

WI-337 Cissel House Wicomico County

Continuation Sheet 7.2 Description

There are three brick chimneys, one chimney located on the north elevation and two interior chimneys; one located on interior of the "L" intersection of the gabled roof and the second in the rear of the structure, on the interior wall between the second and third bays. Eaves overhang slightly.

The garage is a one and one-half story, frame, two bay structure. The facade features double fixed 6-pane vertical windows with simple board enframements adorned with decorative shutters, centered over the sliding horizontal wooden garage doors. The structure is sided in horizontal clapboard (same as porch) and painted white with green shutters. The front gabled roof is surfaced in asphalt shingles.

WI-337 Cissel House Wicomico County

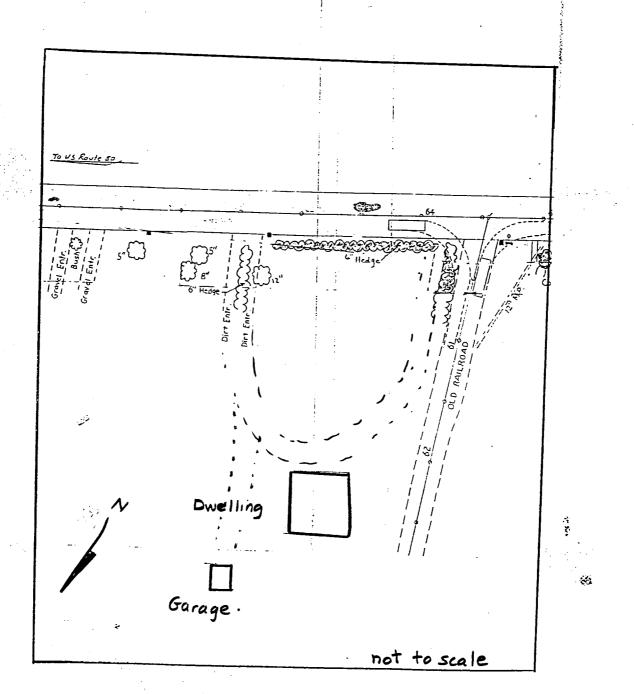

Continuation Sheet 8.1 Significance

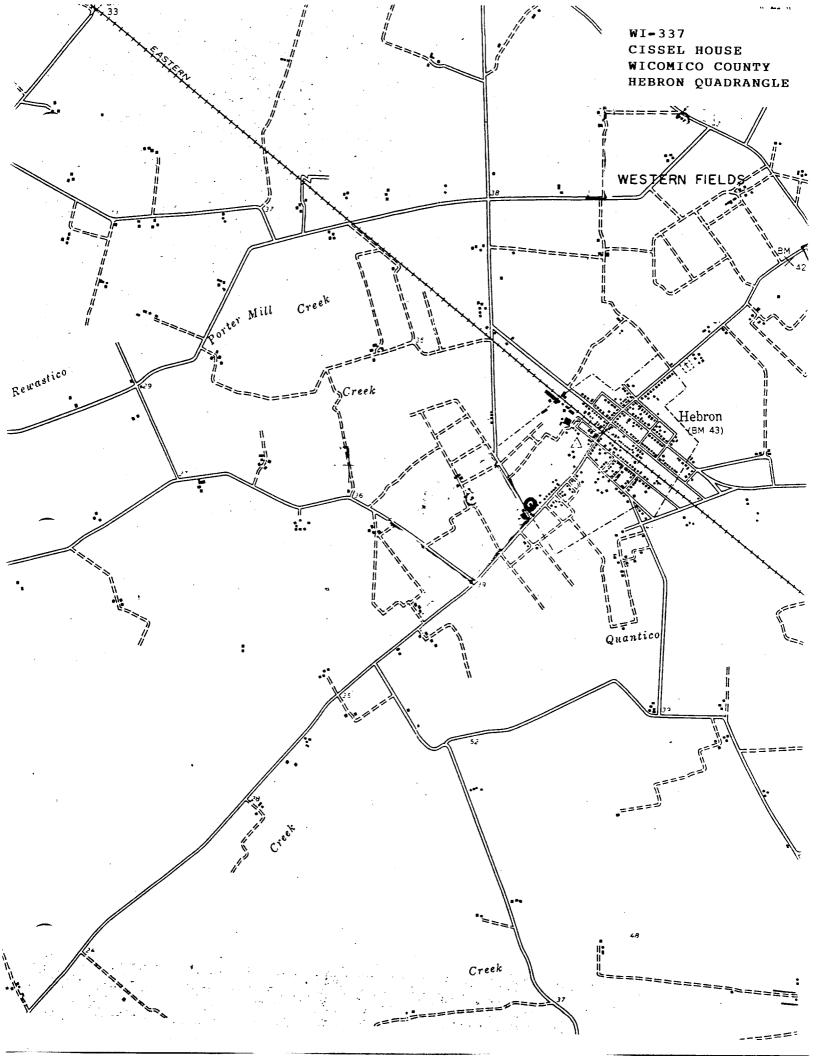

This dwelling is an example of the early Colonial Revival Style, ca. 1920-30. The consistent multi-pane upper sash hung above the lower sash of a single pane window configuration reflect the Craftsman and Prairie styles influence popular between 1905-20, and clearly defines the vernacular revival style period. The triple windows on the facade (covered from view by the porch enclosure) further identifies the house as Colonial Revival. The second-story overhang sub-type of this style (called Garrison Colonial) was popular after 1930.

Style and setback from the street distinguish this structure from houses in the general environs, which are mostly 20th century, two-story "I" houses or 20th century one-story cottages. The dwelling is known locally as the (Kay) Cissel house, for the previous owner who taught at the "new" school, which opened across the street (Old Railroad Avenue) in 1931. The school, originally named Hebron School, now Westside Intermediate School, is located on a parcel of land carved out of the St. Giles (MHT WI-30) property.

The structure has minor significance as a Colonial Revival Style dwelling which replaced the original structure owned by John E. Harris, as noted on the Lake, Griffing, and Stevenson Atlas, 1877. Stephens Harris settled in the area and in 1811 purchased a 272 acre tract. Prior to his death in 1814 he built the plantation known as St. Giles* (WI-30) well to the west of an area which was settled about a century later with the coming of the railroad (and named Hebron). His son, John E. Harris, continued to farm the land and acquired additional acreage. This current structure, in the early Colonial Revival Style, has been compromised with additions and other modifications which negatively impact its integrity.

^{*} According to Forman H. Chandlee (Old Buildings, Gardens and Furniture in Tidewater Maryland) "the origin of the name St. Giles comes from that of a church near Coventry, standing in a part of England from which many settlers emigrated to the section of the Eastern Shore surrounding the plantation....", p. 167.
